U.S. officials' memorial in Beijing halted

Associated Press

BEIJING — Police tangled briefly Wednesday with three U.S. lawmakers who held up a banner and laid flowers in Tiananmen Square in honor of the pro-democracy demonstrators who died in 1989.

To those who died for democracy in China," read the three-foot-long banner held up by Reps. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., Ben Jones, D-Ga., and John Miller, R-Wash.

Police ran up to the three and tried several minutes to stop them from leaving the square. They were allowed to go after a short, confused exchange with police hampered by language difficulties.

Police immediately scooped up the flowers. They scuffled with three American TV crews that filmed the incident and detained them for about 15 minutes.

In another development Tuesday, China told British Prime Minister John Major that a Hong Kong businessman jailed for trying to help pro-democracy activists escape would be released soon, British officials said.

The planned release of 42-year-old leader Lo Haixing appears to be a kind of repayment for Major, who this week became the first Western leader to visit Beijing since the crushing of the 1989 uprising.

The U.S. legislators have been urging Chinese officials to press for the release of jailed dissidents and insist that they will keep fighting for the renewal of China's most-favored nation trade status with human rights.

Most-favored nation status entitles China to lower tariffs on its exports, valued at $10 billion last year, and losing it would cost China billions of dollars worth of sales to the U.S. market.

nation status, said later she did not consider the group's actions in Tiananmen Square provocative. "I felt it was impossible for us to be in Beijing and not visit there, and we wanted to have a solemn moment when we put the flowers there."

The legislators had dinner later Wednesday with Vice Foreign Minister Liu Huaqu. Pelosi said the incident was mentioned, "but I don't want to go into it. Our hosts were very gracious."

The Chinese government issued no public comment on the incident.

At a news conference shortly before the incident, the legislators said they had given Chinese officials a list of nearly 1,000 names of political prisoners they want released.

Gorbachev runs into opposition on reforms

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Mikhail Gorbachev's plan to revamp the Soviet government and transfer most power to the republics ran into stiff opposition Wednesday from lawmakers who stand to lose their jobs.

Gorbachev prodded a reluctant Congress of People's Deputies into giving preliminary approval of the resolution.

But the margin was far short of the two-thirds majority he would need for final passage of constitutional amendments. That showdown vote could come Thursday.

"You're insulting us!" angry legislators shouted at one point. "If you behave like that, it won't make our work any easier," a testy Gorbachev shot back.

The plan was put forward by Gorbachev, Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin and nine other republic leaders.

Gorbachev told delegations from each republic to submit proposals for amending the measure to a legislative commission that was to work through the night in advance of Thursday's session.

The Soviet president decided not to put the issue of Baltic independence to a vote and told officials he would grant it by presidential decree.

The decree releasing the Kremlin's grip on Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia will come after the conclusion of the congressional session, said Lithuanian official Algimantas Cekuolis and Gorbachev confidant Alexander Yakovlev.

Despite passing an important procedural test, the fate of the restructuring plan was uncertain.

"All right, all right," said Gorbachev. "The law is still up in the air."

Police cracking down on trespassers, vandals at Academy Square

By BILL DERMODY
City Editor

Provo Police say they are cracking down on trespassers and vandals at Academy Square.

"People need to know that (the academy) is private property and if they're on it, it's trespassing," said Capt. George Pierpont of the Provo City Police. "We want everyone to know that if they're caught there, they're going to get arrested, and if they're BYU students we'll inform Standards."

Pierpont said violators will be charged with criminal trespass and possibly criminal mischief — vandalism. Both are Class-B misdemeanors, and each carries a possible maximum penalty of a $1,000 fine and six months in prison.

He said eight arrests were made at the academy last week, a majority of which were BYU students. One of these persons was injured trying to escape from police.

"They were trying to get away from one guy fell about a story and a half, and he was OK," he said. "The other guy fell three stories and probably broke his ankle. We had to call the paramedics for him."

Betty Harrison, director of the Community Service Foundation of Utah County, said the vandals inhibit the foundation's efforts to renovate the building.

"Our concern at this point is that we're spending our valuable time repairing the damage that vandals have done instead of working on our renovation projects," Harrison said.

She said before the police put Academy Square under constant surveillance, repairs of damages caused by vandals needed to be performed on a daily basis. "I've got one person here who, all he does is fix fences," Harrison said.

Harrison said she will pursue prosecution for anyone arrested on the property. "Vandals will not be tolerated — I don't care who they are. They will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. And that's for their own protection as well as ours," she said.

Harrison asked all residents and passers by to report any suspicious activity to the police. "There have been times when people climbed right over the fence, in front of a bunch of people who never did anything."

Fire victims died behind locked doors

Associated Press

HAMLET, N.C. — When the screaming started, Carolyn Rainwater was "stripping tenders," pulling ribbons of white meat off chicken breasts for processing. When the screaming grew louder, she looked up and saw the smoke.

"It was the blackest smoke I had ever seen in my life," said the 50-year-old grandmother, one of the few workers to escape serious injury when deadly smoke from a flash fire raced through the Imperial Foods Co. plant Tuesday morning.

Twenty-five people were killed, 49 were injured.

The boundary of life and death was set by the billowing wall of toxic smoke.

Those who worked in the front of the building were able to escape through a main entrance.

Those in the back were trapped between the poisonous fumes and doors locked, employees say, to prevent pilferage.

Friends and co-workers died together in neat clumps on the factory floor.

"In a fire of this nature people congregate together out of fear," said Hamlet Fire Chief David Fuller. "That's where they died."

There were 90 workers in Tuesday's 7 a.m. shift at Imperial Foods.

Once an ice cream factory, Imperial Foods now produces nuggets and other chicken products for Shoney's, Wendy's and other fast food restaurants.

Workers and fire officials say the plant was a maze of large rooms separated by movable walls.

Doors in the rear of the plant were locked, workers said.

Employees say the management had complained someone was stealing chicken.

Some workers were troubled by locked doors, but with jobs, even those paying $5.50 an hour, a commodity in this small community, no one mentioned their fears.

Soviet says anarchy is the answer

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Nikolai Sobolev has a remedy for the ills of his rudderless country, where central authority has all but collapsed and the economy is in ruins: try anarchy.

The disintegration of the Soviet Union, which looks to the rest of the world like something already approaching complete chaos, really is a struggle among systems that equally restrict human freedom, he said.

That goes for Boris Yeltsin's Russian Federation and other republics striving for independence, as well as the smashed power of the Communist Party and the Soviet government.

Their struggle over decentralization, said the 30-year-old Moscow anarchist in an interview Thursday, is "in fact, a transfer of the power of government from one level to another."

Man does not need either and can manage his own affairs with a very minimum of government, he declared.

"Mankind already has outlived the idea of the state," Sobolev said.

The roots of anarchism as a political philosophy are deep in traditional forms of association in the Russian countryside.

They found expression in the 19th and early 20th centuries in the thought of Mikhail Bakunin, Pyotr Kropotkin, and Leo Tolstoy.

Anarchists took part in the revolution that brought Lenin and his Communists to power in 1917. But the revolution turned on them and they later were repressed.

Today's anarchists are not long-haired, bomb-throwing extremists of popular imagination. Sobolev and his companion Vlad Tupikin, both wear their hair short and have closely cropped beards.

"We are trying to teach people that anarchists are normal people, not bandits and not hooligans," said Tupikin, 26.

One of their most important principles, said Sobolev, is non-violence.

They issue no membership cards, but the modern anarchists count chapters in 20 Soviet cities and have participated in most major political rallies in Moscow pressing for more democracy.

They print a newspaper and have a press office complete with an answering machine.

Last year, Leningrad and Moscow anarchists engaged in a bitter dispute over how organized Soviet anarchists should be.

One Leningrader claimed the Muscovites wanted to form a central committee of anarchists, but the Muscovites said Thursday that all they had wanted was a loose coordinating structure.

The Muscovites were on the barrier two weeks ago in front of Yeltsin's Russian government building when Communist hard-liners tried to topple the Soviet government. But that does not make them big fans of Yeltsin.

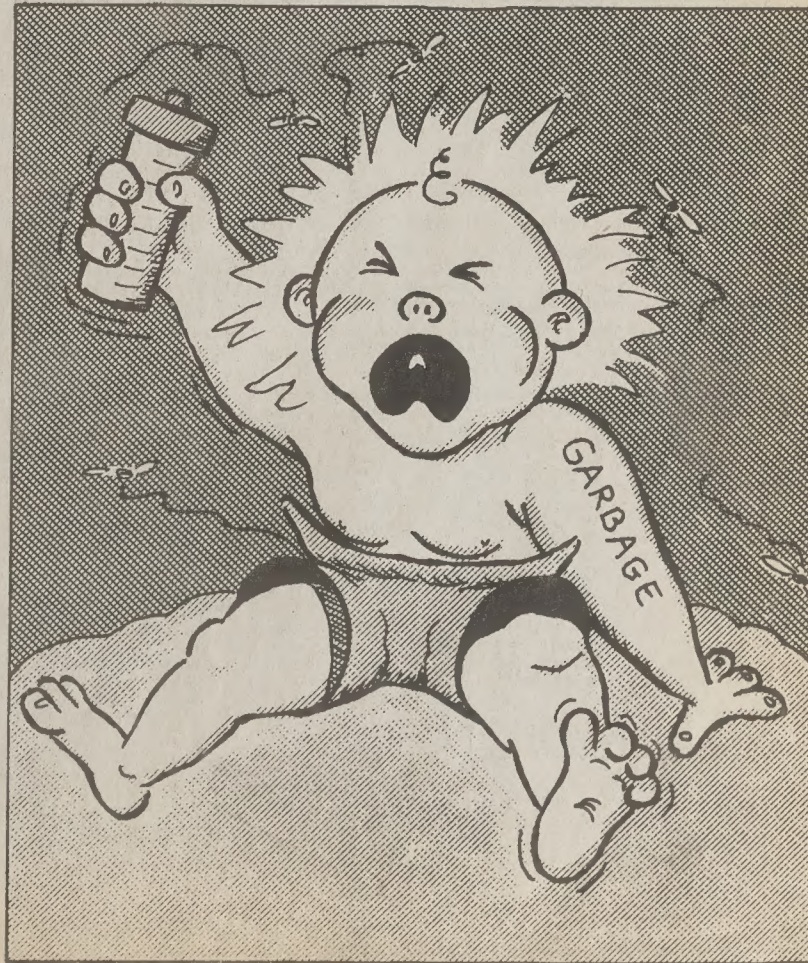

"At that point, we and Yeltsin had a common enemy," Sobolev said.

Since then the anarchists have found plenty to criticize.

"Why do you need to close newspapers on the order of the Russian president?" asked Sobolev, referring to Yeltsin's decree temporarily shutting down Pravda and other newspapers he accused of supporting the coup.

The form of government Yeltsin is developing, complete with a parliament, mayors and prefects throughout the federation, looks a lot like the past rather than a glorious future for humanity, he said.

The anarchists are sympathetic to local councils, strong trade unions and collective ownership.

Provo's garbage stacks up when students move

By STEPHEN LEHNARDT
Universe Staff Writer

Provo garbage is a spoiled rotten child demanding the attention of all who have contact with it, and BYU students and Provo apartment complexes are the indulgent parents.

There is a significant garbage build-up at apartment complexes during the time when students check in and check out between semesters, said Brent Evans, 20, who works in the maintenance department of the Riviera apartment complex.

"It's not so bad at check out, but during check in people throw out a lot of boxes. It's the boxes that take up more room and cause an overflow," he said.

Laidlaw Waste Systems, Inc. is one company on which the burden of disciplining Provo's garbage brat falls.

Rod Detts, division manager of Laidlaw, said, "The garbage volume goes up substantially for a week or so when students arrive and our drivers are hard pressed to complete their routes."

Detts said that Laidlaw has offered to make extra garbage pickups, but few apartments have accepted due to the cost of an extra pickup.

Most apartment complexes try different methods to calm the garbage child's tantrums without having to schedule extra pickups.

David Graham, facility manager for Liberty Square, has the garbage dumpsters emptied daily.

Shelly Savage, manager of King Henry apartments, said maintenance workers pack dumpsters. She also calls for an additional pickups when necessary.

Hyde Taylor, manager of Branbury Park, rents an extra trash bin for two weeks to handle the overflow.

Detts said the pressure to remove the increased levels of waste fluctuates with each season and eventually is self-regulating.

Dottie West dies after 3rd operation

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Dottie West, a poor girl who reaped riches as she helped pave the way for women country music singers, died Wednesday from injuries sustained last weekend in a car accident. She was 58.

She spent her last days singing and battling bankruptcy.

She filed for protection from creditors a year ago, listing more than $1 million in debts.

West, best known for her 1974 hit song "Country Sunshine," severely damaged her liver in Friday night's accident, which occurred as she was en route to perform at the Grand Ole Opry.

Two operations failed to stop the bleeding, and she died during a third operation at Vanderbilt University Medical Center.

Dr. John A. Morris Jr., West's surgeon, said the singer knew what kind of fight was ahead before the most recent surgery started.

"She wasn't able to talk, but she was aware of her condition," Morris said.

"While some people sang words, she sang emotions," said Kenny Rogers, who sang a series of duets with West.

Singer Tammy Wynette said, "She paved the way for so many of us ... us girls."

West's career spanned more than 25 years. Her solo hit, "Here Comes My Baby," won country music's first Grammy Award in the female vocalist category in 1964.

Noriega's attorney was U.S. agent

MIAMI — Manuel Noriega's lawyers charged Wednesday that his former attorney was a secret government informant when he advised the Panamanian leader to surrender during the U.S. invasion of Panama.

Noriega's defense asked to grill attorney Raymond Takiff on counsel he gave Noriega during the months before the December 1989 invasion.

The hearing ended with the judge not saying when he would rule on the request.

Takiff was an undercover agent for the Justice Department in an unrelated case when he advised Noriega to surrender, defense attorney Frank Rubino said.

In October 1989, Takiff counseled Noriega through secret, unsuccessful negotiations with the Justice and State departments, Rubino said.

"Had General Noriega not followed Mr. Takiff's advice, there is a real possibility that this indictment would have been dismissed, and General Noriega would not be here today," Rubino said.

Councilmember calls for 'gangwear' ban

SALT LAKE CITY — A member of the Yalecrest Community Council has demanded schools be allowed to expel students who wear gang clothing or engage in "gang activity."

"What I am asking the school board to do is simply remove them (gang members) from the regular schools and put them some place they can be helped, for the safety of the rest of the students," said Marianne Webster.

Assistant football coach Bill Price was shot in the leg on Aug. 27, when members of rival gangs faced off on East High School's football field.

Webster said her son, Ben, and a Japanese student living with the family witnessed the shooting.

"I felt this was an embarrassment to the community, to Salt Lake City and to me personally," she said.

East Principal R. Kay Petersen said it would be difficult to expel students based on what they wear.

"How do you separate students wearing a (Los Angeles) Raiders jacket from the one who happens to be fan from one who happens to be a gang member?" he said.

Subway motorman charged with murder

NEW YORK — The motorman whose hurtling subway train derailed, killing five passengers, has been indicted on five counts of murder — charges far more serious than the manslaughter counts on which he was arrested.

Police said in arresting 38-year-old Robert Ray last week that he was drunk at the time of the crash Aug. 28.

District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said Tuesday the grand jury upgraded the charges based on evidence Ray fell asleep at the controls and failed to brake as the train entered the station where it jumped the tracks.

A manslaughter conviction would require a jury to find that a defendant acted recklessly.

A murder conviction would require a finding that the action was done with "depraved indifference" to human life.

The crash — New York's deadliest subway accident in 63 years — disrupted service for six days on one of the city's busiest subway lines and injured more than 145 passengers. Service on the Lexington Avenue line resumed Tuesday.

Actor, author dies of stomach cancer

LOS ANGELES — Thomas Tryon, who gave up a career as a Hollywood leading man to become the best-selling author of such books as "The Other," "Harvest Home" and "Crowned Heads," died Wednesday. He was 65.

Tryon died of stomach cancer at his Hollywood Hills home, according to publicist Judy Hilsinger. She said Tryon had been ill for several months.

Tryon's transition from movies to the literary world was as dramatic as any of his film roles. In an interview in October, he attributed the switch to the abuse he suffered from the terrible-tempered Otto Preminger.

The director gave Tryon his biggest role — the lead in a film based on the best-seller "The Cardinal."

"On the second day of filming, Preminger fired and rehired me within one hour," Tryon recalled. "He repeatedly berated me in front of the whole company, calling me a lousy actor."

After reading Ira Levin's "Rosemary's Baby," Tryon was inspired to write his own suspense novel, "The Other."

'Stage mother' gets 15 years for trying to hire a hitman

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A jury Wednesday sentenced a suburban homemaker to 15 years in prison and fined her $10,000 for trying to hire a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's rival for a spot on their school's cheerleading squad.

Prosecutors had asked for the maximum life prison term for Wanda Holloway, 37, of Channelview, who was convicted Tuesday of solicitation of murder.

Hours before being sentenced, a sobbing Mrs. Holloway begged for mercy.

"I think that this trial has been enough punishment for me," Wanda Holloway said, sobbing on the stand.

"I'm totally humiliated. ... I would love a second chance."

Mrs. Holloway was convicted Tuesday of solicitation of capital murder in attempting to hire a hitman to kill Verna Heath.

The crime carried a possible sentence of five years to life in prison and fines up to $10,000.

Holloway had no previous felony conviction. That made her eligible for five to 10 years' probation instead of prison.

Bush, court nominee criticize pro-Thomas campaign ads

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush Wednesday condemned as offensive "totally counterproductive" a television commercial that questions the ethics of liberal senators expected to oppose the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court. Thomas himself criticized the ad. "I deplore such viciousness and condemn such advertising in the strongest terms," Thomas said Tuesday in a statement released by staff members for Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo.

Bush urged conservative Thomas supporters not to run the ad. He said it "was offensive, and it was promptly and quickly condemned" in a statement by his press secretary Tuesday night.

"It doesn't help, in my view," Bush said when asked about the 60-second ad during a photo session before a Cabinet meeting. "You see these things from time to time that are totally counterproductive," he added.

As to whether attacks on the liberal senators can help get Thomas confirmed, Bush said, "If the hope is to contribute something positive to his confirmation, in my view, that's not the way to go about it."

The ads are highly critical of Democratic Sens. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Alan Cranston of California and Joseph Biden of Delaware.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called the personal attacks "reprehensible," adding that neither Bush nor his aides had anything to do with the ad.

"The White House disassociates itself from any advertising campaign related to the nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas that personally attacks members of the U.S. Senate," Fitzwater said in a statement. "This is a shot across the bow," L. Brent Bozell III said in describing the television commercial aired Tuesday by Washington area cable operators in time slots made available to them on the Cable News Network channel and on the Fox Network station in Washington. It was sponsored by Bozell's Conservative Victory Committee and another group, Citizens United.

"We wanted to put the liberal leadership on notice, a straightforward message to the left," Bozell said.

That message: Conservatives are ready to play as rough as the liberals who four years ago helped sink the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Bork.

Senate confirmation hearings for Thomas, a black federal judge nominated by President Bush to replace retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall, are to begin next week. To date, no anti-Thomas advertisements have appeared.

The 60-second ad asks how many of the "liberal Democrats" expected to oppose Thomas "could themselves pass ethical scrutiny."

OPINION

Combine resources in women's center

The efforts of faculty, students and administration to meet the needs of women at BYU are finally beginning to show results. Their achievements would better serve the women of this campus, however, if they were centralized in a women's resource center.

Campus organizations such as the Women in Science Center and VOICE are beginning to address women's concerns in the university community. The International Conference on Gender and the Family held at BYU last February, and the Women's Research Institute have also increased community awareness of gender issues. The introduction of a women's studies minor has also emphasized women's issues.

Beginning with the 1990 Freshman Orientation, new students could attend a seminar "Of concern to women." Elouise Bell, associate dean of Honors and General Education, who has been in charge of the seminar during orientation week, said more students attended the seminar during 1991 orientation. She also said that a women's resource center would "generate awareness" of issues facing women.

Although these and many other programs offer services to women, a women's resource center would make these services more centralized and connected. Women could address grievances, seek counseling and gather information in a casual and non-threatening atmosphere.

A comfortable environment is what BYU women need to address some very uncomfortable issues — sexual harassment, discrimination, balancing career and family goals.

The system BYU uses now is less than friendly. For example, if a student wants to file sexual harassment claims, they must go through the Equal Employment Opportunity Office, even if they were harassed in an academic setting.

While it is commendable that BYU has a system to address this very serious and discriminatory problem, a women's resource center could handle the situation better. Sexual harassment carries a stigma. It is embarrassing, and often victims are reluctant to seek redress. When victims can seek redress in a comfortable atmosphere, in a place where counselors can empathize, the stigma of shame becomes easier to remove.

Because resources are concentrated in the center, individuals avoid being shuffled from advisement centers to Career Counseling to Counseling and Development, through the Placement Center and back to advisement centers. A resource center would also offer networking services with resource centers at other universities.

A women's resource center would not, however, replace any of these existing campus services. Rather, it would enhance them. They would not have to scramble to accommodate students when they can't. They could focus more tightly on their duties and become more efficient.

The actions by university officials to address gender and diversity concerns is promising. It is our hope that they will continue to be as concerned. Their efforts would be enhanced by the creation of BYU's Women's Resource Center.

The 5th floor Cars make the man

by Geoffrey
Thatcher

When I was a freshman at the University of Utah I commuted to school on the Utah Transit Authority (the bus). Every sunny fall day, without fail, a white Cabriolet would race by with a young guy at the steering wheel and three blond and beautiful coeds sitting next to him laughing and smiling.

"I wish I had a car," I'd sigh.

Well, it's been six years since I stood on the corner of 100 South and 1300 East in Salt Lake City waiting for my bus.

Now I have a car. A white, 1981, two-door, automatic, air-conditioned Dodge Aries 'K' car. Not exactly the Cabriolet I dreamed of.

The passenger window won't roll down, the horn is broken, I have to open the trunk with a screw driver and worst of all — vinyl seats.

But why is this relic so important? Why are cars so important? Why will students go in debt instead of give up their cars? Why did the campus go up in an uproar last year when two professors proposed a car ban? The answer.

"It sucks not to have a car at college."

I got this answer while doing a ten page study for my anthropology class on the effects cars have on a student's social life. Here are some of the answers I got to the question: What's your social life like without a car?

Every male student I talked to during my informal survey equated dating with their social life. They said they dated less without a car. They said they felt a little uncomfortable going on a date without a car, and they said they felt a responsibility, as the man, to drive.

All the male students said they did not think women minded going out on walking dates, but all expressed apprehension about going on a date without a car.

When I talked to the women about carless dates I found out one of the reasons why the guys feel cars are so important to dating.

One female student said a car doesn't matter, while another said she wouldn't date a guy who doesn't have a car.

Another said that a car makes a guy more attractive. Others said they didn't think any less of guys who didn't have cars. "But a car is a plus," they said.

The reasons why men and women like cars when dating ranged from convenience, more choices and freedom to travel. One guy put it this way, "You can't go to Sundance without a car."

A couple weeks ago, I spent some time at a leadership conference up Provo Canyon. As part of the "get to know you" games 20 of us sat in a circle and described ourselves as a car.

"I'm a Ferrari," many said. Others were Lamborghinis.

The shorter students described themselves as Mazda Miatas. And, of course, some preferred a forest green Jaguar.

Just to be humble, I said, "I'm a Subaru station wagon."

I'm semi-serious when I say it was sad to see people equate quality with the fast, expensive and popular cars.

It scares me when I hear people say, "I'll know I've made it when I have a car with leather seats," or "All I ask for in this life is a Jaguar." People are equating success with the kind of car a person drives.

I think cars are important, but we place far too much importance on the car.

Why not ban cars at BYU?

At least I wouldn't have to apologize to my date every time she tries to roll down the window. At least I wouldn't have to wish for the white Cabriolet.

And at least I wouldn't have to TRY to find a parking place at 7:55 a.m.

Three months ago I learned first hand that the car really does make the man.

I was walking to my car with a new friend who didn't know what kind of car I drove. As we walked out to my car her eyes lit up as she saw the brand new Honda sports car sitting next to my 10-year-old beat up 'K' car.

"That's your car isn't it," she asked.

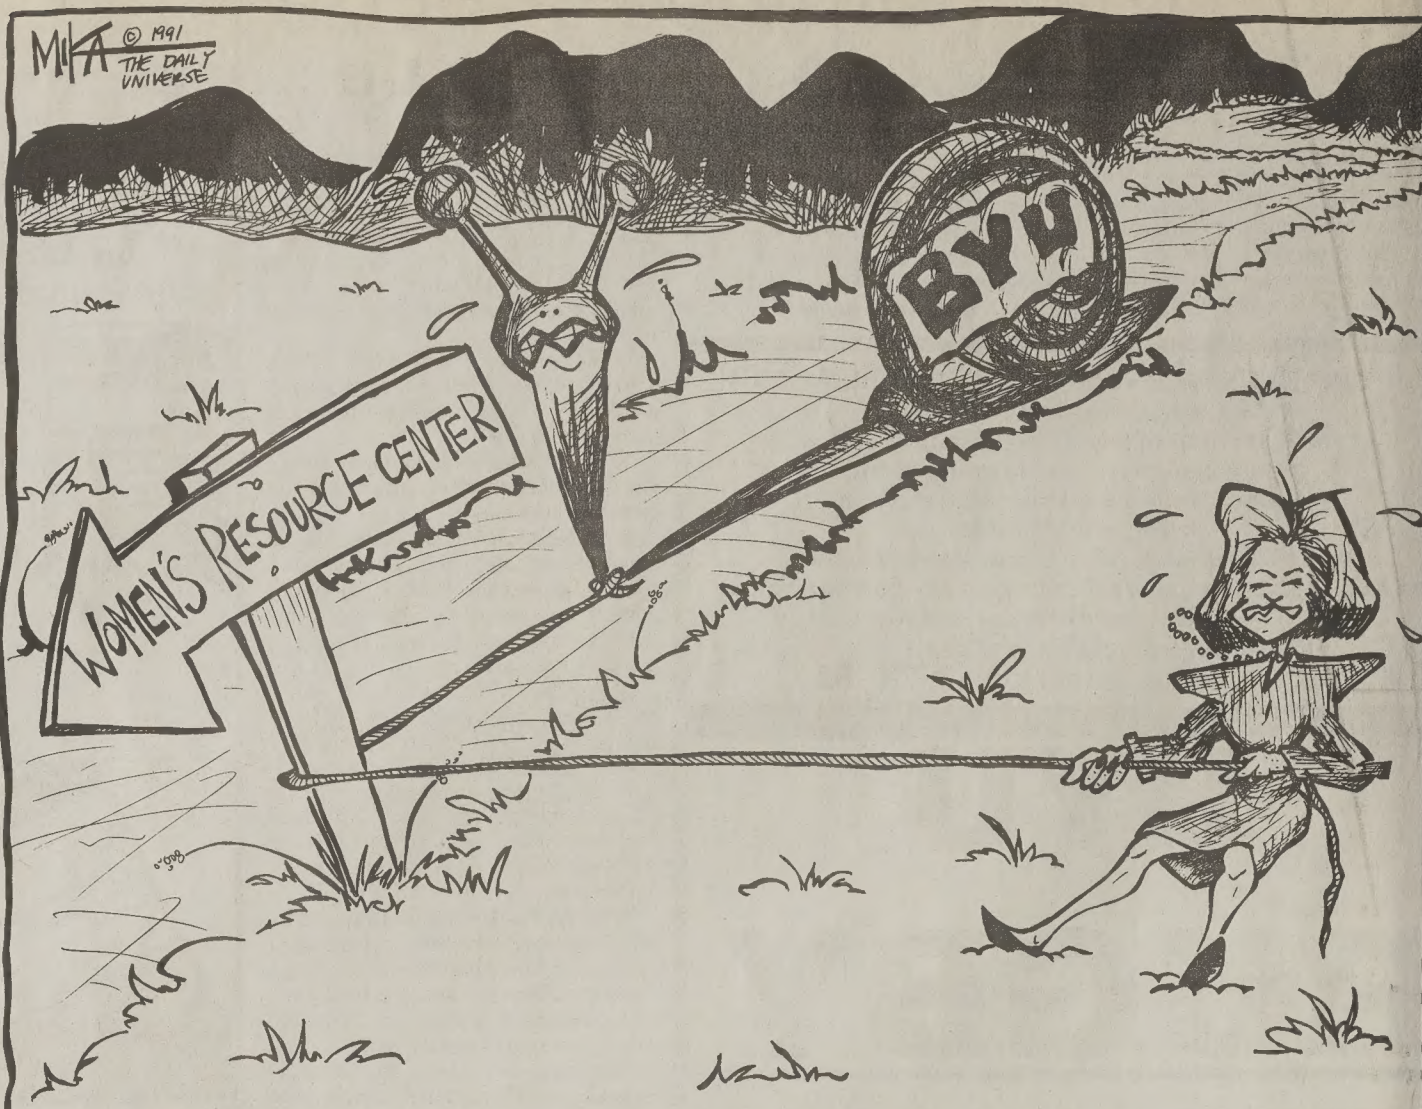

I told her it was not.

"You're teasing," she said, smiling.

"That Honda is your car."

She looked surprised as she sat down in the "K" car's vinyl seats. "Well," she said, "I bet when you buy a new car it is going to look like the Honda."

Campaign integrity

To the Editor:

I am angry and sickened by the recent implications from the Joe Cannon campaign. Steve Studdert served as a convenient scapegoat for the loss of the 3rd Congressional District election last year when the loss was actually the result of the personal problems of various officers and candidates but more especially the fault of the terrible campaign tactics that began early on when there was an entire field of candidates, before Steve Studdert returned to Utah and was asked to lend his name to the losing campaign.

In the background, I have warned various leaders against allowing those things to happen again. The Republicans of Utah County have been smeared by the actions of a few. It is therefore especially intolerable for Jim Young, Peter ValCarce and Chuck Warren, who were in the middle of some of the shameful tactics of 1990, to try to again use Steve Studdert and also the Ted Stuart campaign as scapegoats for their candidate.

Joe Cannon should immediately sit down with Jim Young, Peter ValCarce and Chuck Warren and also insist on a campaign of high standards. It does not matter what happened in 1967. It does matter what happened in 1990 and what standards will be used in this campaign.

No JSB steeple

To the Editor:

Ever since my first semester at BYU, there have been competing claims of superiority between Religious Education and the rest of the university. I would like to prevent the construction of something which I think will only exacerbate the existing tension: the new JSB steeple.

In my experience, the only buildings that have steeples in the Church are chapels and temples. The sacraments and ordinances that are performed in chapels and temples justify these buildings having a separate structure that points toward heaven. I think a steeple aply symbolizes a dedication to God. I think the faculty of Religious Education are dedicated to God. I think that their efforts are sanctioned by God. However, I do not think that Religious Education's sanction and dedication are exclusive at BYU. Indeed, I think that each college and department at this University shares equally in a mission to educate the Saints and build the Kingdom of God.

If the claims to divine sanction are equal among the various departments of this institution, then I think it would be folly to imply that one department is more "of God" than the others by giving one a steeple.

I have discussed this issue with one member of the religion faculty on several occasions. Some of his opinions are as follows:

1. "The structure is not necessarily a steeple." My reply is that the artist's rendition of the thing sure looks similar to the steeples built alongside new stake centers.

2. "The meaning of steeples is ambiguous." I agree that there is no inherent meaning in a symbol — meaning is assigned. In this case, whatever meaning may be assigned to this particular steeple does not change the fact that the only other places that have steeples in the Church are chapels and temples. The JSB is certainly not a temple, and although it is used as a chapel on Sunday, so is almost every other building on campus.

3. "The old JSB already has a steeple, so why change with the new JSB?" The old JSB's steeple is not very conspicuous as a steeple — I used to think it was a chimney. The planned steeple is unmistakably a steeple. It is time to let Religious Education find its long searched-for niche in the university community. A steeple could be an impediment to finding that niche.

4. "If you take away the steeple, I still want our bronze mural of Joseph Smith." I see no problem with that. A mural of Joseph Smith is perfectly appropriate to a building named after Joseph Smith.

I propose that the funds appropriated for the construction of the steeple be given to Religious Education to spend as they see fit. It is not my intention to deprive Religious Education. As a student, I would like to see members of the faculty more united in their respect for one another and set aside their claims to superiority. We are all financed by the same tithing funds and belong to the same Church. Like Brigham Young, I believe that "the truth that is in all the arts and sciences forms a part of our religion" (Journal of Discourses 1:334). I fear that a steeple exclusive to the JSB would only move us away from Brigham's holistic vision.

In conclusion, let me point out that the Carillon Bell Tower already serves nicely as a steeple for the whole campus. I hope that it will continue to do so.

Trim Congress

To the Editor:

The present effort to make constitutional changes at the state and/or federal level in an effort to end "careerism" in Congress certainly has various state legislatures may do more good than good. The proponents of the constitutional changes have failed to properly address the problem.

I will grant that many, if not most, legislators in Congress do not work for the best interest of the people or the country; rather are venal politicians who vote for whatever legislation they feel will best enhance their chances of being re-elected to office. I will further grant that many, if not most, of the legislators in Congress have been elected too many times. For some of them, once would have been too often.

The effort to change the Constitution to rectify this very real problem, no matter how well intentioned, cannot help but make matters worse.

First, a limitation on the number of terms a representative or senator might serve would absolutely, have the undesirable effect of removing from office the few good legislators we have.

Second, it is absurd to believe that such a constitutional change would, in any manner, improve the chances of good men or women being elected.

Changing the Constitution to limit terms would simply guarantee that we would have short term poor or bad legislators rather than the long term ones presently in office.

The John Birch Society's TRIM (Trim the Term) committees have pointed out the point in a number of congressional districts over the past decade. This has been done by publishing and distributing, several times a year, a TRIM Bulletin for various districts. Each bulletin helps us in Americans on two critical issues: how Congress is circumventing the proper role of government and how the local U.S. representative is voting.

With the help of the TRIM Bulletin, voters will be able to judge their representatives and voting record on critical issues.

This is the way to get rid of bad representatives. Leave the Constitution alone. If it's broke, don't fix it!

Lockers available

By ALLISON M. HAWES
Universe Staff Writer

For students looking for a place for their stuff, there are lockers around campus designed for just that purpose, but they're being rented out fast.

The Physical Facilities Department coordinates most of the lockers on campus through Custodial Services in 285 BRWB.

Custodial Service is in charge of about 2,900 lockers in different buildings around campus.

The lockers are in the Harris Fine Arts Center, the David O. McKay Building, the Eyring Science Center, the Talmage Mathematical Sciences Building, the Clyde Engineering Building and the Crabtree Technology Building.

Don Wood, supervisor of Custodial Services, said there aren't many lockers left.

Betty Tippetts, executive secretary for Custodial Services, said it's possible for students to rent a locker for more than one semester at a time.

"We encourage them to do it because it's more convenient," Tippetts said. "They don't have to clean the locker out at the end of the semester."

The cost of the locker depends upon its size. The rental fee for small lockers is $1.50; large lockers are $2. They can be rented in 285 BRWB.

The Ernest L. Wilkinson Center also has about 600 lockers on its first floor.

Beverly Evans, secretary to the controller for Student Leadership Development, said about 100 lockers are still available.

Lockers cost $2 for a semester. They can be rented in 327 ELWC.

Evans said renters are notified to clean out their lockers at the end of the semester, but if they don't, the lockers are cleaned out for them, and the contents are taken to Lost and Found in the Wilkinson Center.

Renters have to pay a $5 fee for the cleaning service before they can get their things from Lost and Found.

Evans said the money from fines is put back into maintenance of the lockers.

"The fine offsets the cost of cleaning them out," she said.

"It takes quite a few people to do that," Evans said.

Evans said there isn't much of a problem with vandalism to the lockers, because the lockers are monitored.

"There's nearly always someone there who watches."

She said the Wilkinson Center's lockers are also repaired at no cost, if the locker wasn't intentionally harmed.

CLUBNOTES

The Clubnotes column is for announcements and notices for clubs officially recognized by BYUSA. Announcements for groups or organizations which are not BYUSA-sanctioned clubs appear in the At-A-Glance column. Clubnotes is published by The Universe as a service to students. All submissions must come through BYUSA. Clubnotes submissions must be in English and should not exceed 25 words.

Deadline for Clubnotes is noon on Tuesdays. No exceptions. Continuous events must be resubmitted each week.

STUDENTS OF THE CONSTITUTION - Students of the Constitution study the Constitution in the tradition of the Founding Fathers. Come join us Thursdays at 7:30 p.m. in 258 ELWC.

MILITARY SIMULATIONS CLUB - Do you enjoy playing games like Risk, Shogun, 1830 or Starfleet Battles? Then come join us! Wednesdays 5:30 - 11:00 p.m. and Saturdays 9 a.m. - 11 p.m. 365-367 ELWC.

More doctors recommend extra-strength HP

More and more PhDs across the country are recommending Hewlett-Packard financial and scientific calculators to their students. And for some very strong reasons.

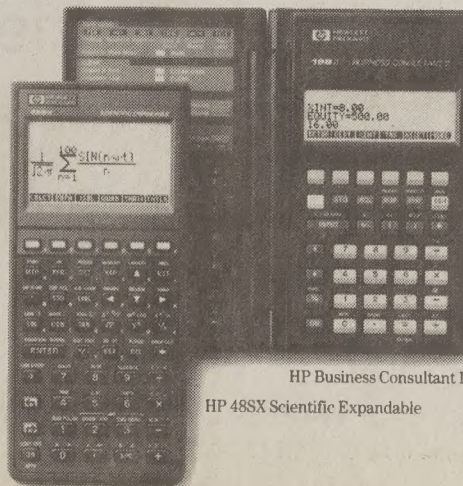

"The HP 48SX Scientific Expandable has powerful graphics tools that are remarkably helpful to students learning mathematical concepts. And with the equation solver feature, it's excellent for applying mathematics to engineering," according to Dr. William Rahmeyer, a professor of civil and environmental engineering at Utah State University.

"The HP Business Consultant II has an equation solver and extensive math functions. These free the students from computational tedium so they can think and interact on a higher level," says Dr. Lee V. Stiff, a professor of math education at North Carolina State University.

So go check out the HP calculator line at your college bookstore or HP retailer. You'll agree, there's no faster relief from the pain of tough problems.

HP calculators. The best for your success.

BYU developing plan to recruit minorities

By KATHRYN BAER
Universe Staff Writer

Eddie Griffin, a 17-year-old member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is a senior at College Preparatory School in Oakland, Calif., and will graduate in June with a 4.0 GPA. He plans to major in biochemistry and expects to be recruited by Ivy League schools because he is qualified and because he is black.

How could BYU successfully recruit Eddie? With generous scholarship offers from prestigious schools in the East, the prospect of coming to BYU doesn't exactly entice Eddie. Academics aren't the only reasons.

At BYU, Eddie would be one of the 3 percent of students who are minorities. "There is a cycle at BYU that draws some minorities away. Minorities don't come to BYU because there are few minorities here, but there are few minorities here because minorities don't come to BYU," Eddie said.

BYU is developing a minority recruiting program. As part of the program, BYU is considering several factors, said Rex Pugmire, area coordinator in the minority recruitment program. As the LDS Church grows internationally, BYU, as a Church-sponsored school, should reflect the racial composition of the Church.

By the year 2030, only 4 percent of LDS members will live in the United States. "Current rates project accelerated growth in most areas of the less developed world in the next forty years," Pugmire said.

As part of its educational program, the Church wants to give every qualified and eligible student the opportunity to attend BYU. Finally, BYU must consider that all students benefit from greater exposure to different cultures and races, he said.

By increasing minority student population through active recruitment, BYU hopes to give each student, whether a minority or not, a more well-rounded education. "As BYU does a better job of exposing its students to a greater array of cultures, everyone benefits," Pugmire said.

"Increasing minority numbers ensures that the university will be a better reflection of the Church's population," he said.

Erlend D. Peterson, dean of admissions and records, said, "BYU's administration intends to reach out to minority students who meet the academic requirements for entrance and extend to them the opportunity to attend BYU."

One problem the university faces in recruiting is finding where qualified minority students are. The university tries to identify and contact minority members, Peterson said.

BYU's recruiting program is in the formative stage, Peterson said. Recruiters plan on working through ecclesiastical leaders to identify the qualified minority students, he said.

"As we reach out to invite minorities to attend BYU, we need to be consistent about admitting students with the academic preparation to perform at the academic level required," Peterson said.

Academic requirements will not be lowered to ensure a cross-section of students. "Our goal is to plant seeds to ensure success in the university, not fill quotas," Pugmire said.

What can make the difference in a minority student's decision to attend BYU is the influence of a school with high moral standards.

Kevin Giddins, 29, a black graduate student in choreography, from Matawan, N.J., was recruited by BYU to perform with the Young Ambassadors. "By recruiting, BYU has realized that more diversity means a better education for everyone."

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

BEFORE TRUSTING YOUR FUTURE TO ANY COMPANY, ASK FOR SOME LETTERS OF REFERENCE.

You put more than just your savings into a retirement company. You put in your trust and hopes for the future, too. So before you choose one, ask some questions. How stable is the company? How solid are its investments? How sound is its overall financial health?

A good place to start looking for answers is in the ratings of independent analysts. Three companies, all widely recognized resources for finding out how strong a financial services company really is, gave TIAA their top grade.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, TIAA IS LETTER-PERFECT.

TIAA received A+ from A.M. Best Co., AAA from Standard & Poor's and Aaa from Moody's Investors Service. These ratings reflect TIAA's reliable claims-paying ability, exceptional financial strength, superior investment performance, and low expenses. With its guaranteed rate of return and opportunity for dividends, TIAA is one of less than ten companies, out of 2,200 nationwide, that received these highest marks.

CREF. FOUR MORE LETTERS
EVERYONE SHOULD KNOW.

For further growth potential and diversification, there's the CREF variable annuity with four different investment accounts to give you the flexibility you want as you save for the future.

Together, TIAA and CREF form the nation's largest private retirement system, with over $95 billion in assets and more than 70 years of experience serving the education community. For over one million people nationwide, the only letters to remember are TIAA-CREF.

Behind every star is a good manager

KARA L. SCHNECK
Universe Staff Writer

Talent isn't always enough to make it big in the music business these days, according to a local promoter and manager.

Most producers in the music business would agree that promotion is one of the key elements to any performer's success.

Promotion is critical," said Brian Haslam, promotion and marketing director for Airus Records.

You can have the best talent, but if you're not promoted properly, how do people know how good they are?" said.

Candy Jernigan, concert promoter and director of the artist development program in Provo, said, "We've seen a problem in Utah because there is so much talent but they don't know where to go or what to do with it."

We do some local talent here at night, but there has been no way to merchandise it," said Lynn Norin, manager of the artist development program and owner of Annie's Country.

Gabrielle Candiani said, "The difference between a dreamer and a winner in this business is that the dreamer knows what he wants but doesn't know how to get there. The winner knows what he wants and how to get there." Candiani is a local promoter and composer and knows how the business can be.

Candiani can be considered a winner in the music business. He and his partner John Wiseman are currently with Airus Records and will begin a world-wide promotional tour in September.

The duo primarily sing Latin music and will be traveling to places such as Spain, Italy, Mexico and South America.

The tour will also cover predominantly Latin areas in the United States including Miami, Fla., Houston, Texas, and Los Angeles, Calif..

The group is also negotiating offers with Warner Brothers, CBS and Capitol Records.

Candiani grew up playing music, however he did not pursue it seriously until four years ago. He was a waiter at Los Hermanos and put everything he made into buying equipment for his music.

It was at Los Hermanos that Candiani met Jimmy Osmond who in turn introduced him to his manager Manuel Montoya. It has been the collaboration of Airus Records and Montoya that has provided the exposure crucial to the duo's success.

Local promoter and manager of the band Basic Language, Mikko Skousen, said it takes constant effort to promote the band.

"Whenever you see an opportunity, you've got to jump on it," Skousen said. "You're working with probability and chance in this business. You've got to always be increasing the chance that the band will be seen or heard by the right people."

Skousen said he always has demotapes on hand to give to people. He also works with radio stations and club managers on a regular basis to gain exposure for his band.

"People skills" are also important in a performer's career. Skousen said it is necessary to understand people and know how to approach them. "You wouldn't approach a club manager the same way you would a radio manager," Skousen said.

Local composer and performer Kurt Bestor also stresses the importance of communication skills. "When you get to this level, everyone is good," Bestor said.

It is the "people skills" that sets one apart. "You can't be a cloistered monk, you have to be friendly," Bestor said.

"If someone is shy it's not going to be easy to promote them," Haslam said. "If you're lazy or don't like people you won't make it either."

Haslam said the business is hard work and he looks for those who are committed and willing to do what it takes to be a success.

"When you have a job in this business, very rarely do you end at five," Bestor said. "Part of the process is working hard."

Bestor said he works six days a week until about 9 p.m. every night. He says he is finally beginning to see his hard work pay off.

In 1988 Bestor and longtime friend, Sam Cardon, had the opportunity to compose the original music for the Winter Olympics. "It was a once-in-a-lifetime experience," Bestor said. "I felt like one of the athletes — it was a marvelous experience."

Bestor began his music career while attending BYU. It was during this time Bestor was employed as a musician and staff arranger at the Osmond Studios in Orem. Bestor said the job helped him learn about studio work and the skills necessary for working with clients.

It was also at BYU Bestor began writing jingles to make some extra money for school. Bestor attributes his early jingle writing as the first step on the ladder. "They were a great first step in writing," Bestor said.

"It's not glamorous but it's good experience," he said.

Bestor graduated from BYU as a music major and is pleased with the training he received at the school. Walter Berkedahl, manager of administration support and head of recruitment for BYU's Music Department, incorporates practical training into the curriculum.

"In every class they're focusing on the things you'll need to know for your future career," said Shannon Fry, 24, a senior in vocal performance and pedagogy from Silver Spring, Md.

"Overall the training is there and they've applied it to how you can use it in the real world," she said.

Bestor advises young artists to "never close your eyes toward any kind of music. You have to be willing to be open to different kinds of music."

He also tells performers to hold strong to their morals. "No amount of money, fame or awards are worth losing your integrity over."

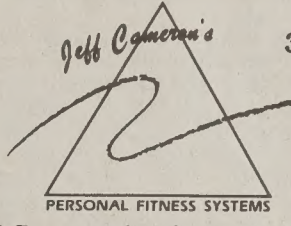

Candiani said for prospective musicians to be successful they need to visualize what they want to accomplish, plan step-by-step how they're going to get there and finally follow through.

"Many times the nature of this business is how long you can make it economically before you actually make it in music," Candiani said.

"You cannot see music as an abstract career. If you think like that you're dead. Music is a product just like anything else."

Bestor said if one is to be successful in music, it needs to be a full-time commitment.

CHECKING. FREE.

Research shows that four out of five students prefer free checking over checking that costs them money. Which is why four out of five students should be banking at Zions Bank.

You see, if you write less than 10 checks per month, you can open a checking account at Zions for free. No service charges. No fees. No fine print.

In addition, you can apply for a free Zions Visa Banking Card that works as both a check guarantee card and a plastic check — good anywhere Visa is accepted. The same card also gives you 24-hour access to your money via Zions Reddi-Access teller machines.

Of course, since Zions is the state's leader in student loans, we can do more than give you a checking account — we can also loan you money to put in it. Or you can apply for a student credit card.

So come to a Zions Bank and open your account now. For a limited time, you'll get a free 2 liter bottle of Coke, a free pack of Trident gum, and a free 32 oz. Zions Student Services mug, just for opening a new student checking account.

Because research told us there's something students like better than free checking. Free stuff.

Sanchez family knocked out of Open

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Martina Navratilova had Jimmy Connors on her mind as she scampers around the court against a panting, weary teenager and surged into the U.S. Open semifinals.

"I kept coming in," she said after her 6-7 (6-8), 7-6 (7-5), 6-2 comeback against Arantxa Sanchez Vicario on Wednesday. "I saw Jimmy doing it over the course of five sets. I said, 'Gosh, how can he keep it up for almost five hours?' But I thought if he can do it for that long, I can do it for half the time. I figured if he could do it at 39, I can do it at 34. I'm a spring chicken next to him."

An incredulous look crossed Sanchez Vicario's face when she was asked if she thought Navratilova, a four-time U.S. Open champion, was old.

"No-oh!" the 19-year-old from Spain said with a laugh, her eyes popping wide with astonishment that anyone could think such a thing after she'd just been turned into a sagging heap by the indefatigable Navratilova.

Navratilova broke Sanchez Vicario's last five services to win the 2-hour, 12-minute match, reach the semis here for the 12th time in 17 years and set up a match Friday against No. 1 Steffi Graf.

Graf, who beat Conchita Martinez 6-1, 6-3, has beaten Navratilova in their last four matches and has breezed to the semis without dropping a set.

Navratilova struggled in her second straight three-setter of the tournament but got some lovely gifts from Sanchez Vicario, none more welcome than a forehand volley dumped into the net with the court wide open on the final point.

Navratilova was off the court after chasing down a backhand, and when she saw Sanchez Vicario miss that last easy shot, she pumped her fist and celebrated her return to the semis for the first time since she made the finals in 1989.

She could not have gotten there without considerable help from Sanchez Vicario. Among her many presents was an overhead off the frame of her racket on break point in the 11th game of the second set. Navratilova had just hit a lunging forehand that sat up nicely for Sanchez Vicario and was watching from off the court when the No. 4 seed whacked it long.

Navratilova then tied the set 6-6 and won the tie breaker when Sanchez Vicario smacked an easy forehand wide crosscourt on the last point.

Not only did Sanchez Vicario fail to hold service in the final set, but she won only four points in the four games she served.

Navratilova had her troubles holding, too, suffering two breaks in the third set, but she never trailed.

"It is not like I hit that great a variety of shot, but I just kept attacking and believing that that is the right way to do it. And it was. I started getting the feel on her serve and how to break it, so as long as I stayed ahead, I felt comfortable."

It was a bad day for the Sanchez family, as Arantxa's brother Javier lost a men's quarterfinal match to Stefan Edberg, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

NFL owners told to pay $18 million

Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — A federal appeals court told NFL team owners Tuesday to pay more than $18 million into a players' pension plan, but refused to order improved benefits for retired players.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a U.S. District Court order requiring the 28 NFL clubs to pay delinquent pension funds sought by the players.

The three-judge panel reversed lower court findings that some pension plan trustees had breached their duties and that the court should set retirement benefits for players.

"The clubs failed to make their full contributions but we do not believe the conduct of the trustees for the owners constituted a breach of their fiduciary obligations," wrote Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III.

He was joined by Judge Robert F. Chapman and U.S. District Judge Claude Hilton of Alexandria.

The judges also overturned the lower court's appointment of a special master to set pension improvements.

"It is for the trustees and not for the courts to determine the extent of any benefit increase," the appeals court said.

In a trial before U.S. District Judge Joseph C. Howard of Baltimore, the teams were ordered to pay $17.8 million in unpaid contributions, plus 12 percent interest, attorneys' fees and costs.

Gene Upshaw, president of the NFL Players Association, said the amount owed by the owners has grown to nearly $30 million, counting interest. The money has been held in a court escrow account while the case is pending.

"We firmly believed that the appeals court would uphold the district court," Upshaw said. "The only part that disturbs me is that the court didn't order immediate improvement in the plan."

Upshaw said the special master found that the pension fund has enough money to increase retirement benefits by at least a third for all players. The NFL said the appeals court upheld the league's position on two important points — whether the owners' trustees breached their duty and whether the court could order improvements in pension benefits.

"This again shows that union claims of so-called victories in the courts are more rhetoric than substance," said Greg Aiello, an NFL spokesman.

The dispute began in 1982 when the players association and the council negotiated a new contract.

Flag football tournament this Saturday

by JEFF GRAHAM
Special to the Universe

Fall semester means more than just Ty Detmer interviews, BYU football and class schedules; it's also time for thousands of BYU students to participate in intramural flag football.

To help students prepare for the regular intramural season which begins Wednesday, the Intramural Office has organized a Fall Kick-Off Classic Tournament Saturday.

The Fall Kick-Off Classic tournament is an annual event that allows 20 teams to participate. For the past three years Ghetto Magic Athletic Club, one of the more successful flag football teams in Utah, has helped organize this annual tournament.

This year Ghetto Magic has teamed up with the Intramural Office to organize the tournament.

"Flag football tournaments promote more than just individual athletic ability," Trevor Ehrman, graduate assistant in charge of intramural flag football, said.

"It also gives teams good practice time, and they allow intramural officials a chance to learn the rules and practice their refereeing skills."

For more information concerning the tournament, call the Intramural Office at 378-6654. A $1 entry fee for the tournament is $200 per team.

Boat racing tops action at Bear Lake this weekend

by BOHANNON
Special to the Universe

Whatever attracts people to sailing events, whether it's the atmosphere, competition, fresh air or just exercise, it can all be found this weekend at Bear Lake, where the Hobie International Sailing Event will be held.

The event is sponsored by Utah's Fleet 67 to raise funds for the 1992 National Hobie Class Association Championships at Bear Lake. This is the 10th annual event.

The first Hobie event was organized in southern California 22 years ago, said Bill Ware, a Fleet 67 official.

The Utah fleet was organized in 1974 and is considered the ground force because there are now more than 600 fleets organized in Utah.

Ware said local fleets hold five regattas in five divisions. Prizes are awarded to qualify for the national championship races.

This season Division 5 sponsored regattas at Strawberry Reservoir, Dillon, Colo.; Hattie, Wyo.; Aurora, Colo.; Glendo, Wyo., and N.M.

Prizes, trophies, and points are awarded to the winner of each race.

This year South Bay in San Diego, Calif., will host the Hobie championships beginning Sept. 25 and run through Oct. 5.

Sailing is about the cheapest sport activity going today, said Ware. You can join the United States Sailing Union (USYRU) for $25 annually. It includes a rule book and a subscription to American Sailing.

Pro football could be coming soon to Salt Lake

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Pro football could be coming to Salt Lake City in February, according to an official of the Professional Spring Football League, which hasn't yet announced its existence.

Ed Valtenbergs said Wednesday from the league's offices in East Rutherford, N.J., that a search is underway for a local owner.

The new league plans an Oct. 1 news conference to announce its existence. Valtenbergs said the league's organizers plan a single-entity corporation, licensing each team as a franchise for a fee of $250,000.

Team operations will be funded through the league office, and Valtenbergs said the team would be placed in Salt Lake City even if an owner is not found.

"We have the funding for all league operations," he said.

Valtenbergs said he believed that agreement in principle has been reached for the team to play in the University of Utah's Rice Stadium.

"It suits our needs," he said. "In (Rice Stadium) we could get 35,000, but we'll be happy with 20,000 per game. We're not selling minor league ball, but we're not selling the NFL either."

Florida attorney Mike Meisler, who described himself as "counsel for certain aspects of stadium leasing and player development," said Ned Alger, the university's associate athletic director, had not returned his phone calls.

But Meisler said he had been told by league president Vincent Sette that "all systems are go for the use of Rice Stadium. Logistically, it is my understanding that Salt Lake City is ready and ripe."

University athletic officials could not be reached by telephone late Wednesday for comment.

He also said the league had been "trying to keep things pretty quiet until we get organized. Right now, we have a number of owners. We're just trying to finalize our franchise agreements," Meisler said.

Valtenbergs said the league is designed to be a professional league rather than a minor or developmental league, and that it would pursue NFL players.

The league plans to use a draft system that implements territorial exemptions to try to keep BYU and University of Utah players in the area, he said.

Meisler said a name for the team will be chosen at a board meeting Monday in East Rutherford. His nomination which will be the Salt Lake Stallions.

Who is this Maslow man and what do his so-called "needs" have to do with me?

I need to come up with a car by the weekend!

Put that in your hierarchy. I just have to win that convertible. That's all. I've never won anything before.

Except for the Bundt Cake in cub scouts. It's a brand-spankin' new GEO METRO —

ReD,
topless,
fast

and I've come to believe it's rightfully mine.

There's got to be something I can do to tilt the odds.

I'd date Maslow if I thought it would help. Course, I'd dump him after dinner. I'm obsessing now. Think about something else.

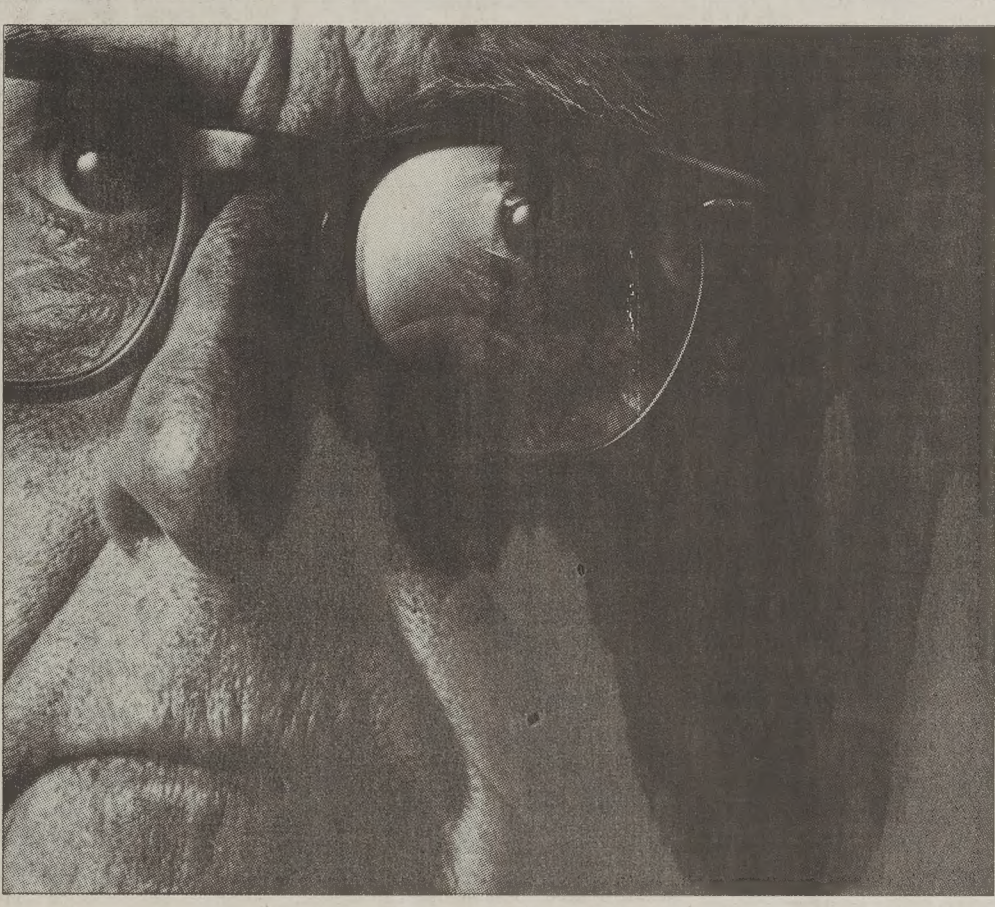

Personalized license plates would be nice. Although studlicious is probably taken.

I wonder if Mom and Dad will like me better with a Geo Metro? They'll certainly like the fact that it got me to open a checking account.

Dad will want to know if I get free checks, if I have a VISA card, if I have ATM access, and if the account stays open during the summer. I'll respond with a resounding "yes."

Mom, on the other hand, will want to know what's on my checks — little desert vistas or scenes from the Donner Party?

"Now class, who can summarize Maslow's hierarchy of needs? Anyone?"

I'll tell her that's personal. Let's just pray this whole open-a-student-checking-account-and-enter-to-win-a-Geo** thing actually gets me the car.

I'm obsessing again. If I win, I win. If I lose, I just become more dysfunctional.

Nu Skin expands to Hong Kong

Firm's officials hope branches bring revenue, jobs to Utah

By BILL DERMODY
Staff Editor

Nu Skin International of Provo will expand its operations into Hong Kong this month to begin a comprehensive international expansion plan, company officials hope, and bring more jobs and money to Utah.

"We plan to open Nu Skin Taiwan in the fourth quarter of 1991. During 1992, we'll work toward opening Japan, Australia and New Zealand," said Gregory Newell, managing director of Nu Skin's International Department, in a press conference Wednesday.

According to Nu Skin, Newell served as the United States Ambassador to Sweden from 1985 to 1989. He also served three-and-a-half years as the U.S. Assistant Secretary of State.

According to a company news release, Nu Skin Hong Kong was incorporated in February 1991 and will begin operations on Sept. 25.

Newell said much planning has gone into this expansion, and the company plans to take it one step at a time and not rush the process.

"We will be following a deliberately designed plan as we move forward to implement a strategy for expansion in the Pacific Rim area. It would be imprudent, an unwise plan, to set off such an expedition without a carefully detailed and precisely articulated plan, or without a support base," he said.

Newell said Hong Kong was chosen to begin this expansion because of the country's current market trends. "In Hong Kong, sales of imported health care products are increasing at a rate of 17 percent, whereas in the United States it is only 7 percent," Newell said.

Newell said Nu Skin products already have recognition in Hong Kong because of the many Chinese distributors in the United States.

Newell said this expansion would bring money to Utah through increased employment in the company's International Department and through revenues returning to the parent company.

"Nu Skin Hong Kong and Nu Skin Taiwan are Utah corporations with branches in those countries," he said.

The company plans to operate regional and country offices, a distribution center, a training center and warehousing facilities in Hong Kong and other countries.

He said although Nu Skin plans to eventually produce its products in these countries, initial plans call for exporting the products.

"If we achieve what we expect, we will be one of the top 100 exporters in the United States," Newell said.

Newell also said Provo provides the ideal workforce for a company that desires to expand internationally. "You have a workforce that is highly skilled, highly educated, fluent in several languages and is willing to work part-time for modest pay. We couldn't ask for more."

Serbians battle to cut off eastern region of Croatia

Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Serb rebels battled to cut off Croatia's eastern region from the rest of the republic Wednesday and appeared poised to encircle a major Croat stronghold. At least eight people died in the fighting.

Ignoring a truce called to hold an international peace conference this weekend on Yugoslavia's future, Croatian security forces and the federal army also clashed several times.

Germany's foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, warned the Serb-dominated Yugoslav army that if it failed to halt the fighting, European nations could proceed to recognize Croatia and neighboring Slovenia as independent nations.

"I'd like to tell those responsible in the leadership of the Yugoslav People's Army: With every shot fired by your cannons and tanks, for us the hour of recognition is brought nearer. We will not be able to watch this much longer," Genscher said in Bonn.

There has been speculation that Serbia, which dominates the federal army, might be willing to settle for Croatian secession if Serbs can gain control over parts of Croatian territory in the bargain.

Federal military leaders say the army is trying only to separate the warring ethnic groups, but many foreign governments support Croatia's contention that the well-equipped army has been instrumental in the Serb rebels' gaining control of about a quarter of Croatia.

The latest attempt at a truce was included in an agreement signed Monday by national and republic leaders under prodding from the 12-nation European Community.

The pact only seemed to touch off a fresh push by militant Serbs.

After winning control of Baranja, an east Croatian section just below the Hungarian border, the Serbs on Wednesday began a push to isolate Croatia's ethnically-mixed eastern region, Slavonia, from the Croat-dominated sections of the republic.

Croatian Defense Ministry officials said Serbs cut the main highway between Zagreb, the republic's capital, and Belgrade, the capital of the Yugoslav federation and rival Serbia.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said one Serb died and three were wounded in the fighting that cut the highway near Okucani, 75 miles southeast of Zagreb.

Two federal soldiers were wounded, and Croatian forces suffered several dead and wounded, it said.

The Serbs commandeered trucks, cars and buses to block the highway before dawn Wednesday, highway workers at the scene told the AP. The Serbs and Croats battled as highway workers towed most of the vehicles away. Ivan Turek, head of the workers' crew, said he expected the road to reopen Thursday after the Serbs were driven off.

A Croatian militiaman and a civilian were killed and five civilians were wounded in the nearby town of Nova Gradiska, the Croatian news agency Hina said.

Marketing harmful products unethical, Y professor says

By ROB BOWERBANK
Universe Staff Writer

A heated debate is raging on the practice of advertising legal products that are harmful to those who consume them, a BYU professor of advertising said.

Lee Bartlett said the practice of marketing harmful substances could easily be regarded as unethical. However, the fact that tobacco products and alcoholic beverages are legal consumer goods causes a dilemma in deciding what should and should not be marketed.

"The challenge to any manufacturer is to find a segment of the market that will consume the product," Bartlett said. "A company that manufactures malt liquor will feel it has no ethical problem targeting a segment of the market that consumes the product the most."

An example of target marketing is the Suzuki Samurai. In all countries outside the United States, the Samurai was marketed as a utility vehicle. However, when the product was marketed to the United States, it was targeted at young people with money, Bartlett said.

"It is common practice to design a product to market to a certain segment," he said.

Recently, the targeting of certain ethnic groups by malt liquor manufacturers has come under protest by members of these communities.

Malt liquor, which has a higher alcohol content than beer, has been marketed heavily in black and Hispanic communities. The groups claim the advertising is directed at these groups because of color only.

Targeting ethnic groups "is perfectly legal; however, ethically it is up to the individual," said Spencer Harden, president of Harden Advertising.

He said the nature of advertising requires using effective persuasion. "Nobody is forced to buy anything that is advertised."

"If a company markets a product that is socially harmful, the public should be aware of it."

Harden also said companies shouldn't target these types of products toward certain ethnic groups because it will be seen as exploitation by the company and does not leave a favorable impression on the public.

"There are now even stronger malt liquors being introduced on the market, and the majority of the marketing efforts for these drinks are being carried out in black or Hispanic communities," Harden said.

Dee Thorell of Highland Ridge Hospital said because the black population in Utah is so small, the problem is not an issue here. "That problem exists mostly in eastern cities like Detroit and New York," she said.

Utah has taken steps to eliminate much of the alcohol advertising altogether.

Doug Murakami, a compliance officer at the Utah State Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, said according to Utah law, no alcoholic beverage may be advertised on outdoor media.

"This includes billboards on roadsides and vehicles," he said.

Taverns or private clubs may display advertisements inside their buildings, but they cannot be seen on the outside of the establishment, Murakami said.

Advertising on print or broadcast media is allowed, but the advertisements must not encourage youth to consume alcohol.

Rape crisis center needs volunteers

By CHAD G. DAYBELL
Assistant City Editor

Although Provo is a relatively quiet city, many people each year become victims of rape and violent crime. Thankfully, there are volunteers in the community who help victims come to terms with such situations.

The Center for Women and Children in Crisis specializes in helping ease victims' trauma, and it has scheduled training meetings for community members interested in becoming volunteers on the Rape Crisis Team.

The orientation meeting for new volunteers will be Sept. 12 at 7:30 p.m. in the United Way Volunteer Center, 148 N. 100 West, said Diane Starks, the center's volunteer coordinator.

Subsequent training sessions will be held Thursdays from 7:30 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"Volunteers are desperately needed," Starks said.

"Already this year we have responded to more rapes than we did during all last year. Male volunteers are especially needed," she said.

Once Rape Team volunteers have completed 30 hours of training, they work on-call once a month for a 48-hour period.

The center tries to maintain 30 to 40 volunteers at a time.

Rape Team members are paired up, with each pair having a "primary" and a "backup" team member. The primary volunteer works directly with the rape victim, staying with him or her during police questioning and medical examinations if necessary, according to the center.

The backup volunteer supports victim's family and friends during crisis.

"Without these committed volunteers a lot of rape victims would have no one to turn to for support," Starks said.

Utahns favor abortion rights, survey reports

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A majority of Utahns responding to a survey said a woman should have the right to choose whether to have an abortion.

Of the 400 people questioned statewide in the survey by Insight Research, 57 percent said a woman should have the choice, 31 percent said she should not and 12 percent had no opinion or declined to answer.

The survey, with a margin of error of 4 percent, was conducted for The Salt Lake Tribune, which reported the results in a copyright story.

The right to choose was supported by 46 percent of the Latter-day Saints surveyed, 75 percent of the Catholics and 79 percent of the Protestants.

It was supported by 38 percent of the Republicans, 41 percent of those leaning Republican, 64 percent of the independents, 40 percent of those leaning Democratic and 49 percent of the Democrats.

A poll in January before the Legislature approved a new, stricter abortion bill found 54 percent favored the more lenient law in effect at that time. After the law passed, 59 percent said they approved of it. In May, 57 percent responding to a survey opposed spending the projected $1 million cost to defend the new law.

"Looking at the continuity of results, with the exception of that February anomaly, I think clearly that Utah is not as pro-life as some of the individuals who were supportive of the more restrictive abortion law," said David Spatafore, Insight vice president. He said the cost of defending the law "may have dulled some of the pro-life sentiment."

Gov. Norm Bangerter said the poll cannot be taken to reflect a pro-choice view by most Utahns because the question was too general.

"Our bill says a woman should have the right under certain circumstances," said Francine Giani, the governor's spokeswoman.

Utah's new law, which is not being enforced pending litigation, bans abortions except in cases of reported rape and incest, grave fetal deformity or danger to the mother's health.

The state wants the suit challenging Utah's law to be held up until the U.S. Supreme Court rules on Louisiana's even stricter abortion law.
